HARPER AND BROTHERS.

But that strange, speaking dash of eyes remained to haunt and torment Gale. It was indescribility sweet, and provocative of thoughts that he hallowed were wild without warrant.

"With Laddy and Jim?" asked believed were wild without warrant. It dawned upon him that for the brief instant when Nell had met his gaze she had lost her shaness. It was woman's questioning eyes that had plerced through him. Next day Dick believed he was well enough to leave his room; but Mrs. Belding would not permit him to do so. She was kind, soft-handed, moth-erly, and sho was always coming in to minister to his comfort; yet falle felt that the friendliness so manifest in the soft of the state of the soft of the soft of the the soft of the so in the others of the household did not extend to her. He was conscious of something that a little thought persomething that a new thought per-burded him was antagonism. It sur-prised and hart him, ite redected that there might come a time when it would be destrible, for beyond any ground of every-day friendly kindli-ness, to lave Mrs. Belding be well disposed toward him. So he thought about her, and pomiered how to make her like him. It did not take very long for Dick to discover that he liked her. Her face, except when she suited, was thoughtful and sad. But it seemed too strong, too intense, too nobly liked. It was a face to make one serious. Like a haunting shadow, like a phantom of happier years, the sweetness of Nell's face was there, and infinitely more of beauty than had been transmitted to the daugh-ter. Dick believed Mrs. Building's ter. Dick believed are, remainder friendship and motherly love were worth much striving to win entirely aside from any more selish motive. He decided both would be hard to
